One hundred and eleven women give time and strength in visiting practically every house in Norwich, asking subscriptions, and the amount brought in, after weeks of work, often several visits being made to the same house, is $1,262,41. This subscription shows an average of eighty-seven cents to a contributor.

Does this mean that the women of cents to a contributor.

Does this mean that the women of Norwich are willing to allow eighty-seven cents to be their annual offering, which must be divided between the City mission, the employment bureau, the Sheltering Arms, the Rocknook children's home, the thirteen or more clubs and many other charities? Is this the measure of our love and generosity to the little children for whom we make a home, the hundreds of boys and wirs in the clubs and of boys and girls in the clubs and classes who are learning to become valuable men and women, to the old people, whose days are nearly spent, and who look to us to make sweeter and easier the evening of their lives?

Could all learn as I have of the infinite care given to the spending of these contributions, of the thought, time and steps, taken to save a few pennies, could all hear each month of the work done by the bays women of the work done by the busy women of the various committees, could all know of the alleviation of suffering and the happiness spread through these same channels, the result would, I feel sure, be different.

Reed the annual report of the United Workers, and estimate how far the money is made to go. Take for instance, the children's home—the children are physically and morally cared for by skilled attendants, at an average cost of three dollars and fifty cents each, per week. These figures show the care which is given to details.

And now, is it just to allow our

She was placed abourd the 1.20

o'clock train. The woman for the past week has been intent on leaving the institution and has often expressed the wish to return to Jewett City. She told the authorities that she could have a home in the household of Alphonsus Moat in Jewett City, with whom she has resided. The woman seemed rational and the authorities could see no reason that she should not be granted her request to leave the institution. She could remember every pocurence since her detention and knew to the cent how much money she had when searched, even the denominations of every bill and the amount of silver and pennies.

She was not charged anything for her board or lodging at the alms-house, as the woman had not a cent in the world except the amount which was found on her, $257.
